Apple's latest quarterly earnings report, released on Tuesday morning, revealed a record quarter for the California company, as iPhone sales improved to record highs and the iPad outsold the Mac for the first time. Apple's gross profit more than doubled compared to the same quarter last year, while its gross sales increased by over a quarter. The report also boasts about record sales of iPads, MacBook Airs and iMacs; a big jump from the previous year and all of them are still selling. Apple declared a record quarterly profit of $13.5 billion, which is an 81% jump from last year's earnings of $7.75 billion, and $12.8 billion revenue increase. Apple's iPod business, though, declined 7% from the year before to around $1.5 billion in sales. The company's Apple Music and Beats business was up 62%. The iPad, not surprisingly, was the company's most popular product, selling 74.4 million units for a 26% sales increase from the year before. The total sales of all Apple hardware grew by a quarter. Android still has a long way to go, but last year, it grew 33% from the year before. "Our results were driven by strong customer demand across all of our product categories, and robust growth in all of our geographic regions," Apple CEO Tim Cook said in a press release. "We had a very strong start to the holiday quarter, and we're very excited about the current momentum we're seeing in many of our product categories," Cook added. "In our June quarter, we expect to continue to see strong sales of iPhone, iPad and Mac,
