The International Physical Activity Questionnaire (IPAQ) is one of the instruments used for PA assessment. However, cross-cultural adaptations of the IPAQ are not available in Brazil. This study aimed to translate and adapt the IPAQ, test its reproducibility and reliability, and test its validity in the Brazilian population. The study was carried out in three stages: initial translation, independent review and synthesis of versions, and revision and final test of the translation. The reliability of the questionnaire was tested by test-retest (3-10 days) of the participants. Validity was evaluated by correlation with other questionnaires and

Support for Portable Document Format (PDF) documents: Support for imported PDFs and derived XPS files allows you to quickly make a change to your model in AutoCAD while working outside of AutoCAD. Connect to SolidWorks, AutoCAD Architecture, and Revit models. Easily import and exchange model data using Autodesk Data Migration Suite. HDR (High Dynamic Range) images: When you shoot photographs and videos with your smartphone, you often capture a scene in a wide dynamic range of colors. Although you can adjust the contrast in your smartphone's photo editor, once you convert the image to JPEG format, the color range is typically limited to the full-scale grayscale colors. These limited colors are too bright and too dark for most presentations. To fix this problem, you can take a high-resolution photo and apply a process called High Dynamic Range (HDR). The photo's data is saved in the high dynamic range format, and then the image is processed and displayed in auto-levels. To make it easier for users to access their AutoCAD models, every model is now natively supported in the browser of AutoCAD. This means you can view the model by selecting "Open Model in Browser". There are some steps you need to take to ensure the browser can recognize the model: Make sure the .3dm is a valid file type for your model, either .3dm, .dwg, or .dxf Check the "Save as .3dm, .dwg, or .dxf" box and make sure the "Save Location" is set to the folder you want your model to save to Make sure the "CAD Type" is set to DWG Make sure the "Autodesk DWG® Document XML Settings" for the file has the property "Enable AutoCAD Extensions" set to TRUE. The latest update also allows you to sync with AutoCAD from other devices such as your PC or tablet. So whenever you update your model, it will be synchronized to your AutoCAD database and can be viewed right away in your browser. New Formats: There are some new file types that will be automatically converted as well: .rasa The new rasa format provides large-scale support for the non-
